Books & Chapters (In Process):

Alexander Craft, Renée. She Looks Like Us: A Novel
She Looks Like Us a patchwork quilt of two fictional middle-class Black Diaspora families—one situated in the southern US and the other located on the Caribbean coast of the Republic of Panama. It draws heavily on my ethnographic research with the Congo community of Portobelo, Panama as well as my experiences of growing up in a Black Southern "funeral home" family in Charlotte, NC.

Edited Books (In Process):

Kathy A. Perkins, Sandra L. Richards, Renée Alexander Craft, and Thomas F. DeFrantz, eds. The Routledge Companion to African American Theatre and Performance. London; New York: Routledge. (forthcoming).

Products of Interdisciplinary and Engaged Scholarship:

Digital Portobelo: Art + Scholarship + Cultural Preservation
<http://digitalportobelo.org/>

Initiated through an inaugural 2013-2014 UNC Digital Innovations Lab/Institute for the Arts and Humanities Fellowship, "Digital Portobelo: Art + Scholarship + Cultural Preservation" is a collaborative, interdisciplinary, digital humanities initiative that focuses on the Afro-Latin community of Portobelo, Panama. It represents the second phase of Alexander Craft's fourteen-year performance-centered critical ethnographic research that began in 2000.
